Chip Collins dies

Valley mourns fire chief

By MILDRED HATTON

THE LATE FIRE CHIEF Chip Collins was an honorary uncle to several generations of Valley small-fry who regarded him with a great deal of affection and respect. Here he was attempting to console a very young, very distraught Michael Allard.

Flags flew at half mast last week as the Valley mourned the loss of a good friend, Carmel Valley Fire Chief, Alexander A. "Chip" Collins, who collapsed and died Tuesday at his Valley home.

Regardless of age — or income — he had touched the lives of hundreds in the Carmel Valley Fire Protective District in which he served, as well as beyond it where he was known and respected throughout the Central Coast Counties Fire Association and the Monterey Bay Area Fire Chiefs Association. He was past president of both organizations.

The New Jersey native who had served over 21 years with the Carmel Valley Department had gone up through the ranks from volunteer to paid fireman and replaced O.T. "Val" Valnizza upon his retirement as chief.

Training programs for departmental preparedness as well as first aid and safety courses for individuals' protection were given top priority and scheduled by Chip at the fire house. He was always searching for new life saving techniques.

Few people are aware of his unlogged hours over the years as he maintained around-the-clock vigils during the summer fire season and patrolled the river to alert residents of winter flood dangers.

His quiet concern for a family or individual did not end with the completion of an emergency call. In some instances he continued to counsel and offer assistance for years. It was tantamount to him that no one be left alone to cope with his problems. Chip was his own best "public relations man" — a familiar sight in the pick-up "707", and later the department carry-all, always involving his men and equipment in community affairs — fiestas, parades, civic benefits — and the fire house has always been a special field trip for elementary students.

Each person who knew this very dedicated citizen reflected the memories of his association as they paid final tribute at the recitation of the rosary on Thursday and the Mass of Christian burial on Friday at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church.

PLANNING THE AMERICAN Red Cross Blood Banks was of vital concern to the late Chip Collins shown here mapping strategy with Dr. David Morris.

Chief Collins was born June 16th, 1927 in Passaic, New Jersey. The 49 year old Valley-ite was a Navy veteran of World War II.

In addition to his wife, Buffie, he is survived by daughters, Katherine, Patricia, and Sharon Collins, all of the Valley and Dorothy Smith, who came from her home in San Diego for the services. His mother, Mrs. Veronica Collins was here from Clifton, New Jersey as were his brothers, John of Sunnyvale and Tom of Oakhurst, New Jersey.

Interment took place in Golden Gate National Cemetery, San Bruno.

Those wishing to make donations in his memory are requested to do so to the Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department.

The valley gets a new ambulance

A rattlesnake bite followed by a sheared axle precipitated the whole thing! Those who weren't too sure that the Carmel Valley American Red Cross ambulance really needed replacing decided in a hurry that the most expedient method to make sure that emergencies were covered in the future was with the purchase of a new vehicle.

The board members of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter of the American National Red Cross voted approval for an up-to-date vehicle immediately after last month's accident with the old one. Since June 1st, ambulance volunteers have responded to all ambulance calls in a new, reliable, durable, burnt orange and mellow cherry Medic Module vehicle. Kalani Fonseca, Carmel Valley Fireman and Red Cross representative and Bill Hill, Carmel Red Cross Ambulance

IT WAS A PROUD DAY for the Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department when the 1965 Oldsmobile Ambulance rolled onto the pad at the Via Contenta Station. Checking out their new emergency vehicle were (l-r): Don Corona, the late Don Laird, a department Captain; and the late Chief Chip Collins. A fitting memorial to Chip, a new ambulance donated by the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross may be viewed this Sunday 1-5 p.m. at the CV Fire House.

Chairman, have invited the community and everyone to come see this new rescue and transportation vehicle at an Open House Sunday, June 5 from 1-5 p.m. to be held at the Carmel Valley Fire Protection Station, Via Contenta Road, Carmel Valley Village.

The ambulance program is a Red Cross service unique to the Carmel Chapter, since it is the only chapter in the country that owns, operates and maintains an emergency ambulance service at no charge to the patient. Members of the Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department learned First Aid and answered calls in a donated panel truck in 1957-59 before acquiring a nine-year-old cast-off Cadillac from the Carmel Red Cross ambulance volunteers. The ambulances in Carmel and Carmel Valley are staffed by volunteers and firemen when required, the Big Sur group are all private citizens organized into a Red Cross unit.

The cost of maintaining the ambulance service has been steadily mounting over the past few years and the chapter directors hope that interested members of the community will donate toward the price of the new ambulance.

It has little seismic activity but,

The valley has its faults

Carmel Valley, while it has earthquake faults of its own, is more likely to sustain damage from a major earthquake centered outside the valley.

That is one of the conclusions reached in a draft statement on geologic hazards drawn up by Robert Greenwood while he was doing work on the revision of the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

In his subcommittee report, scheduled for reading at the June 16th master plan study committee meeting, Greenwood notes the possibility of seismic damage in the valley, particularly on the valley alluvium of the valley floor. He also warns about building within an eighth of a mile of the valley's active faults and on steep slopes of Monterey Shale.

If development is proposed in areas such as these, Greenwood (a registered geologist) advises, "Then planners should require that detailed geotechnical studies be made, at the developer's expense, to minimize possible damage to life and property and to the natural environment.

While Greenwood notes that the period of settlement in the valley is far too short to establish the pattern of behavior of valley faults, he notes that the valley is flanked by three active fault zones: the San Andreas to the east, the Palo Colorado to the west, and a group of minor active faults under Monterey Bay. Those potentially active within the valley (probably moved between 11,000 and 3 million years ago) are:

—Chupines Fault, cutting the extreme easterly corner of the master plan study area.

—Tularcitos Fault, paralleling the south bank of the river from Los Tulares to Garland Park.

—Berwick Canyon Fault, a group about a mile long in Tierra Grande.

—Navy Fault, running from north of Mid Valley Center to the head of Canada de la Segunda and on to the Naval Postgraduate School.

—Lower Carmel Valley Fault, mentioned in the county's geotechnical study, but not pinpointed. It may be just east of Carmel Middle School.

The county has recorded 47 significant earthquakes between 1838 and 1970, only 12 of which were of local origin.

Greenwood notes the threat of ground rupture along any of the potentially active faults is relatively low, but that ground shaking could cause damage to structures near to the fault.

But the greatest danger to valley buildings comes from major quakes from outside that could cause damage to multi-story buildings on valley alluvium, or damage to buildings through landslides, lurch cracking or liquefaction on stable ground.

The decor was floral

"Everything's Comin' Up Roses" would have been an appropriate musical background for the Social Club's benefit bridge and canasta party held by members of the CV Community Chapel Guild in their Fellowship Hall. Hostesses Martha Huff and Mary Young used the fragrant blossoms in the decor on the dessert table and about the room.

Table prizes were awarded to: Alice Broberg, Rachel Swanson, Phyllis Catalano, Ruth Mullens, Gene Fairchild, Velma List, and Nellie Mirani. The first prize in bridge was won by Bernice Leoni, with Ruth Wade placing second. Canasta winners were Elizabeth Hoisington, first, and Kathryn Walker, second.

Millie Grant assisted by Nellie Mirani will be hostesses for the June 15th party and cordially invite all ladies in the area to join them for an afternoon of cards and refreshments. For reservations, please phone 659-2454.

Members are urged to bring guests and new Valley residents are especially welcomed.

St. Dunstan's Benefit

"April showers bring May flowers" (artificial miniature blossoms in tiny flower carts covered with tiny white lace parasols) — in spite of the drought at the benefit bridge and canasta party sponsored by St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church.

Hostess Kathryn Walker welcomed players who filled three tables of canasta and eight tables of bridge to her Flight Road home. Assisting her with party preparations were Ann Melching and Mary Young.

Among the winners of the clever carts presented as table prizes were: Louise Garrett (a new club member), Irene Selfridge, Ky Dahle, Dorothy Chappell, Dorthy Gonzenbach, Ruth Neveau, Mildred Blacow, Lucille Ambrogio, and Elizabeth Freidenthal.

High point winners were: Irene Selfridge and Dorothy Chappell for bridge, and Lucille Ambrogio and Mildred Blacow for canasta.

Barracudas at Willow Glen

Fifteen members of the Carmel Barracudas Swim Team traveled to San Jose last weekend to compete with members of 27 other Northern California clubs in the AAU "B" meet sponsored by the Willow Glen Swim Club. Outstanding performers for the Barracuda boys were Jeff Mink, with a second place finish in the 200 yard individual medley, and Tom Zeleny with an "A" time and 3rd place in the 50 yard breaststroke, and a 5th in the 100 yard breaststroke. For the girls, Jennie Mink captured a 3rd place in the 50 yard freestyle, Emily White a 7th place in the 100 yard backstroke. Results:

Chapel Guild Luncheon and installation

On Wednesday, June 8, the Carmel Valley Community Chapel Guild will have a Spring Salad Luncheon at 12:15 p.m. in Fellowship Hall on Village Drive, followed by a meeting and installation of officers and directors for the ensuing year.

Mrs. Thos. B. McKiernon will chair the luncheon assisted by co-chairman Mrs. Egon Werdelman and Mrs. Edmund Capon, and a committee composed of Mrs. Michael Palmer, Mrs. Theo. Mirani, Mrs. Vera Stokes, Mrs. S.N. Trevino and Mrs. Raymond Danielson. Members will bring their favorite salad to share on this festive occasion.

The officers and directors for 1977-1978 will be headed by Mrs. Don Johnson as President, Mrs. S.N. Trevino, Vice President, Mrs. Michael Palmer, Secretary, Mrs. Edmund Capon, Treasurer, Miss Esther Trevino, Corresponding Secretary and directors Mrs. Thos. B. McKiernon and Mrs. Theo. Mirani.

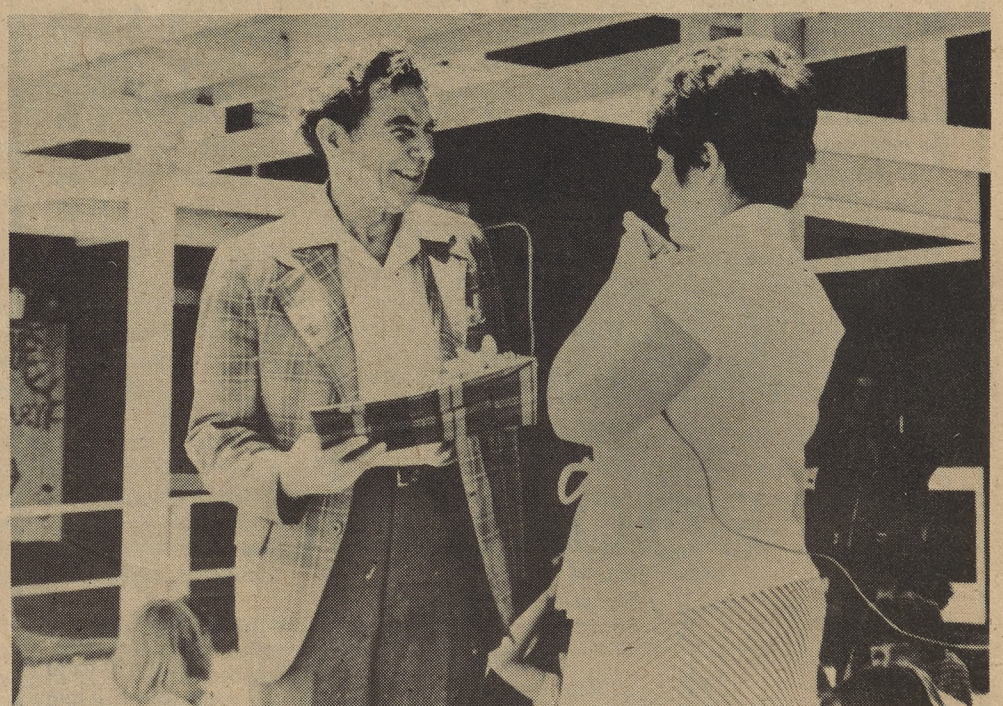

The day will be one for sharing, the members will share their salads, and then Mrs. Charles Richmond will share the treasured poems and stories from her childhood. Sally excels in her presentation of such a program and delights everyone with her humor, charm, and never-ending source of stories which bring childhood memories to all.

BANNERS, SOMBREROS, AND HANDMADE shawls reflect a South-of-the-border costumed flavor of the May Fiesta at Carmelo School.

BRUSHES WIELDED by the Delta students and countless hours produced this colorful Mexican mural. Seated are Kindergarten students awaiting their turn to perform.

A GIFT OF APPRECIATION was presented to John Farr by the Carmelo Parents Club represented by retiring president, Julie Steele.

by Lucy smithson

This is El Pluggo writing this week. I would like to report on my owner: she's absolutely worthless. Lucy Smithson hasn't been on my back in six weeks. Hasn't brushed me, filed my hooves, checked my teeth, or wiped my nostrils. Me and my pony have been turned out to pasture and forgotten, I guess.

But I'm getting used to the life. There's worse things than being turned out to pasture.

For instance, when Lucy and I are in training for something, we both have to diet. I get fed by the clock. So many pounds of hay and grain for breakfast, so much for lunch. Enough supper to keep me happy till midnight and then starvation until breakfast again. To be fair, Lucy suffers the same diet. Starvation is tough on us glandular types that run to fat.

But in pasture, I get to eat all day and all night if I want. My tummy's never empty. Also it's never overfull from having snuffled up breakfast in one greedy gulp.

The grass in my pasture is really quite delicious even in this dry year. There are permanent green spots where water seeps out of the ground. I prefer to think of these as springs rather than septic tank seepage even though I know that much more water has been pumped up the mountain by Cal-Am than has soaked into the ground from rainfall.

My pasture has oats, rye, vetch, meadow foxtail and rigput grass, and soft chess also called cheat grass. As I pick around for my favorites I choose to graze them in about that same order. For the last month or so I've been eating just the heads full of seeds. If that's not grain, I don't know what grain is.

Pastures in Maytime are a picky eater's delight. Of course my pony is not a picky eater. I've heard Lucy say that Pony would eat anything that stood still and a few things that wouldn't. He gets to graze on a grazing line. When he's eaten everything he can reach, he has to stop eating until Lucy moves him to a fresh patch of grass. This keeps him from eating himself to death. Once a day, he's turned loose to exercise me. Boy! Do we play!

We've been put onto pasture and taken off several times during the winter. It has something to do with not overgrazing the field. Now that the grass has gone to seed and will be a fire hazard soon, it seems to be full steam ahead. About half the grain I'm eating goes right on through and will grow again next rainy season. It's nature's way of reseeding pastures.

Besides eating, another thing I can do in a pasture is to sleep whenever I like. If nature intended me to eat more or less constantly day and night, she intended me to sleep a lot too. I spend a lot of time standing around with my eyes closed and my stomach full. Just resting up from this hard life.

Actually, I don't eat day and night. I have a really good supper from dusk to about 10 p.m. Grass with dew on it is terrific. Then I like to lie down and sleep an hour. Sometimes I do some galloping around in the wee small hours. It's not so much fun though when Pony is staked out and can't gallop with me.

I eat a good breakfast at dawn while the sky grows light. At around seven a.m. I get a silly streak and Pony and I play "rear up" together. I kick and buck. He kicks me. We're very happy. Just to show how happy we are we wrinkle our lips and make a great display of teeth but rarely bite.

Around eight a.m., I lie down, then I sleep standing up again. Both Pony and I are noontime nappers. We lay flat out in the sunshine. Passersby look hard at us and wonder if we're dead.

Sometimes I drink a little water during the warm part of the day. It depends on what I've been eating. The greenest oats and vetch have so much moisture in them I can go forty-eight hours or more without thirst. Wild horses must be able to graze great distances from the waterholes.

Since I'm not thirsty, I wave my nose around in the water and tip the tub over. It's very satisfying to watch the silvery streams run away and soak into the ground. Sometimes I roll in the mud.

Mostly though I roll in my favorite sand pit. The sand sifts between the hairs of my coat and after a good shake I gleam like I've been thoroughly groomed.

Uh oh. Here comes bad news. Here comes Lucy with a bucket of bran laced with worm medicine and a rasp for my hooves. I haven't been forgotten after all. More's the pity.

I knew being turned out to pasture was too good to last.

What's playing at the movies

Annie Hall: Woody Allen's new semiautobiographical comedy about a comedian and his rocky romance with an aspiring singer played by Diane Keaton. Rex Reed calls it Allen's best film to date. At Cinema 70.

Audrey Rose: A frightening story of reincarnation in which a little girl's body is taken over by another little girl, unrelated, who died in a car accident years before. Stars John Beck, Marsha Mason and Susan Swift. At the State

Breakout: Charles Bronson is a daring flyer who rescues Robert Duvall from a Mexican prison, a frame-up engineered by his father-in-law, played by John Huston. Jill Ireland is the feminine lead. At the Marina Automovie.

The Car: A mysterious automobile terrorizes a Southwestern town and ruthlessly strikes down several citizens before the sheriff and his men close in on the demonic driver. At the Valley Cinema.

The Eagle Has Landed: An action-adventure based on the best-selling book by Jack Higgins dramatizes the daring mission of a German paratroop unit sworn to kidnap Britain's wartime prime minister Winston Churchill. Michael Caine and Donald Sutherland star, and Robert Duvall, Jenny Agutter, Jean Marsh, Larry Hagman and Donald Pleasence are featured. Rated PG. At the Marina Automovie.

Family Plot: Alfred Hitchcock's 53rd film stars Bruce Dern, William Devane, Barbara Harris and Karen Black. The suspense master himself plays a cameo role in the screenplay based on Victor Canning's novel The Rainbird Pattern. The plot is two separate stories which finally mesh together. At the Valley Cinema.

The Godfather: Marlon Brando in his memorable portrayal of the Godfather returns in this re-release of the story of the Mafia. Also stars James Caan, Al Pacino, Robert Duvall, Diane Keaton and Richard Castellano. At the State II.

The Godfather, Part II: More than a sequel to the original, the successor to The Godfather envelops the Corleone family in almost three generations of successive underworld power. Rated PG. At the State II.

The Greatest: Muhammad Ali plays himself with his usual flamboyance in the story of his career up to the 1974 fight in Zaire. The film also stars James Earl Jones, Robert Duvall, Ernest Borgnine and John Marley. At the Regency Theatre.

Hard Times: Charles Bronson and James Coburn are barehanded street boxers in the 1933 Depression days in New Orleans. At the Golden Bough.

Mohammad, Messenger of God: A lavish spectacle about the origins of the Moslem religion, encompassing the exile of Mohammad from Mecca and the years of ordeal until his triumphant return. Anthony Quinn stars. At the State Obsession: A haunting psychological mystery drama starring Cliff Robertson and Genevieve Bujold. A rich New Orleans businessman suffers the trauma of the kidnapping and murder of his wife and daughter. Sixteen years later on a trip to Florence, he meets his wife's exact lookalike in the church where he first fell in love with his wife... an eerie chain of events ensues. Rated PG. At the State III.

The Other Side of the Mountain: The true-life love story centering around a desperately injured girl skier whose love of life is equally desperate. Rated PG. At the Village Theatre.

Paint Your Wagon: The big, bawdy musical based on the Broadway hit that revolves around the lives of two gold prospectors: Lee Marvin as the boisterous hard-drinking cynic, and Clint Eastwood as the scholarly, quiet gentleman. At the Hill Theatre.

The Pink Panther Strikes Again: The fourth in the series, with Peter Sellers as Chief Inspector Clouseau and Herbert Lom as Chief Inspector Dreyfus. Rated PG. At the Center Cinemas.

Rocky: The powerful, moving story of a simple prizefighter, his shot at the heavyweight title, and his love affair with a shy pet-store clerk. Sylvester Stallone wrote the screenplay and gives an Academy Award-caliber performance as the dumb punk from the Philadelphia slums who trains doggedly for his "chance of a lifetime." Rex Reed calls it "funny and touching and ultimately worthwhile." Rated PG. At the Golden Bough.

The Slipper and the Rose: A modern Cinderella story with Richard Chamberlain as the unhappy prince in the kingdom of Eurphania. Gemma Craven is Cinderella and the late Dame Edith Evans is the Dowager Queen in this musical version of the old fairy tale. At the Hill Theatre.

Small Change: An endearing and compassionate film exploring the glories and troubles of childhood. An exceptional cast of non-professionals adroitly directed by Francois Truffaut. In French with English titles. At the Dream Theatre.

The Sting: Robert Redford and Paul Newman star in the Academy Award-winning comedy about two con men in the Chicago of the Depression days, preying on the only people with money -- the gangsters. At the Carmel Village Theatre.

Tortilla Flat: John Steinbeck's lovable nonconformists come to life on the screen in the 1942 version of the book. Filmed largely on the Monterey Peninsula. With Spencer Tracy, John Garfield, Frank Morgan and -- imagine -- Hedy Lamarr packing sardines on Cannery Row. Fri., Sat. and Sun. only at the Tantamount.

Wizards: Animated full-length futuristic fantasy by Ralph Bakshi, creator of Fritz the Cat. An allegory of good vs. evil, the story takes place 10 million years from now after the world has been devastated by atomic warfare. Two twin brothers, both wizards, head the opposing camps; the powers of magic and goodness finally triumph over the forces of darkness and misused technology. Rated PG. At the 812 Cinema.

Young Frankenstein: Gene Wilder, Peter Boyle, Marty Feldman and Cloris Leachman have the leading roles in Mel Brooks' comedy spoof of monster-horror movies. At the Center Cinemas

Get your garden down to basic essentials --and mulch, mulch, mulch

Make a cold assessment of your garden, says professional Carmel gardener David Watkins, and take out the expendables.

In this second drought year, you've got to put emotion aside, according to Watkins, and assess your garden and shrubs in terms of replacement value and growth time. Take out the plants that are doing poorly, forget the annuals and perennials, and abandon those big stretches of lawn.

Get your garden down to the basic essentials, Watkins says, and work on a good planned watering program from there.

Watkins is coordinator of a four-week symposium now going on at Monterey Peninsula College. The symposium, which will continue June 7 and 14 at 7:30 p.m. in lecture forum 103, is entitled "Garden Survival in a Drought Year on the Monterey Peninsula."

Watkins arranged the symposium, he says, not to get more customers for professional gardeners like himself (Watkins says he has more work than ever in this drought year), but to pass on professional information on drought gardening to home gardeners. The symposium features literature, exhibits, handouts, lectures and question and answer sessions.

Briefly, Watkins advises that gardeners begin their drought gardening program by mulching around the plants they want to retain. He says he has about five inches of mulch around some wet encourages the plant roots to come back up to the surface, seeking moisture. Then a prolonged surface dryness will finish the plant off quickly.

The idea, Watkins stresses, is infrequent, deep soakings.

"NEVER SPRINKLE," Watkins says with genuine passion in his voice, "that's the single most important thing."

'Don't assume it needs water just because it's been seven days since it was last watered.'

marigolds that are doing beautifully in his own yard — and the last time he watered them was in the fall.

More realistically, most plants during the summer should get by with watering once every three weeks, Watkins says, once properly mulched, possibly to a depth of three inches.

But there are many variables. So how do you tell if a plant should be watered? "You don't assume it needs water because it's been seven days since you last watered it," Watkins explains.

A moisture probe, which reads the amount of moisture in the soil, is handy (costing $10-$35). But a simpler method is just to take a trowel and see how far down the dry soil goes. If it is dry below two inches, watering is called for.

"But if the top inch of your soil is dry," Watkins says, "it's a mulch in itself — a dust mulch. You don't want the top inch wet."

Keeping the top of the soil instead of erect, that's about the last point at which you can delay watering. But older leaves will tend to yellow and drop off this year and Watkins says that's no reason to panic. It's a kind of self defense mechanism that reduces the foliage the root system has to support.

Watkins recommends the drip system over all other systems of watering. It slowly infuses water into the soil while keeping the soil surface dry.

Expensive drip systems are available, but you can also make your own simply by cutting one hole in the bottom of a plastic gallon jug, burying the jug halfway in the ground by the plant, and filling with water.

"At last we've found a way to recycle those one gallon plastic jugs," Watkins says.

Next Tuesday, the water symposium will cover topics like "How Plants React to Drought Conditions,"

"Mulch," and "Will our Trees Survive?" After the session, members of the landscape gardeners association will hold open panel discussion.

Carmel Parents Club Officers

A new slate of officers for the Carmelo Parents Club was elected at the recent Spring open house: Jean Rossi, named president for the 1977-78 term will serve with Kathy and Joe Maggiori, vice president; Nancy Myers, secretary; and Linda Singletary, treasurer. Representing Alpha will be Brenda Shakal and Louise Davis; Delta, Carmen Courtney and Kathy Sparr; and Gamma, Brigitte Fuerstner and Madeline Van Zander.

Tularcitos Parent Club officers

Ginny and Jim Luttrell have been named officers of the Tularcitos Parents' Club for the 1977-78 year. Elected to serve with them were Natalie Rodda, vice president; Nancy Watts, recording secretary; Mary Parsons, corresponding secretary; and Mary Nolte, treasurer.

May Festival

Many Carmelo Parents and friends joined the students and faculty for lunch and remained to enjoy the festivities of the annual May Art and Dance Festival last week. The exhibition of folk dancing and works of art was combined with a formal farewell to Carmel Unified School District Elementary Music Director, John Farr, who is retiring in June.
